

Are you flushing your wealth away?

Toilets are a taboo topic in feng shui. Should your wealth sector fall in this area, there are ways to counter it. Dimple Luniya reveals how!

In feng shui, a major cause for concern is one particular area in a house or property, and that is the toilet. "What if my wealth star is in the toilet? Am I not flushing my wealth away?" I'm asked. To which my answer is that 'a wealth star' becomes a problem not because of the toilet itself, but because we cannot spend enough time to take advantage of the 'wealth chi' in that area.

So, what do you do when you find that the wealth star is located in the toilet? Use alternatives by locating other and secondary wealth star areas. As for the toilet area, what one only needs to do is take care that they are kept in hygienic conditions.

The turnaround

A stockbroker was going through a rough patch in his business ever since he moved to a new residence. He asked me to conduct the feng shui audit of his residence. When I saw his premises, it was not difficult to identify the problem. Since he was a Qua No 3, his wealth sector was in the south which had two toilets situated there. What further added to his woes was the fact that he was sleeping in the west sector facing the west direction, which was his worst direction. I suggested that he immediately shift his bedroom to the secondary wealth sector in the north, and to sleep with the head facing south, his wealth sector. I also got his study table and the gas knobs in the kitchen which were facing the west to face the south, his best direction. The stockbroker called me up a month later to tell me that a property of his in north Mumbai, which he was unable to sell for the last two years, had finally been sold at an unbelievable price. And those who owed him money also paid him his dues.

Tap starry options

Now should you have the wealth sector falling in the toilet, tap it from other directions. The wealth stars are located in different sectors. In the year 2010, the primary star is located in the centre, the secondary wealth star is located in the north-west, while the white star or the wisdom star (for new beginnings) is in the west. The star for recognition and status is located in the east, which can be activated by placing a water feature. Feng shui is not about remedying every situation, but the secret is to find out where the good chi is and then aligning yourself to receive it.
